Andrew Morton Furniture

Following in the wake of The Slow Food Movement, The Slow Design Movement is gathering pace as more people choose to take the time to create beautiful bespoke designs that last and enhance their quality of life. Working in close partnership with skilled experts is at the heart of this concept, and so we have curated a selection of local workshops with a reputation for exceptional design, craftsmanship and service.

Andrew Morton Furniture

A small business with a highly-qualified team, Andrew Morton Furniture designs premium bespoke furniture solutions from its workshop. It tailor-makes for every room in the house, including bedrooms, bathrooms, fitted kitchens, cabinetry and media units. Every project has a project co-ordinator to ensure that the client's individual requirements are achieved.

Evoke

Firmly rooted in fine furniture making, Evoke specialises in bespoke kitchens and wardrobes tailored to suit the particular space, and the client's personal style, from classically modern to traditional. Industrial and eclectic are increasingly popular themes. "Our beautiful hand-crafted furniture doesn't cost the earth, either financially or environmentally," says founder Tom Davies.

The Bookcase Co

As a family-run business, The Bookcase Co prides itself on its personal service, attention to detail and life-time guarantee. It has been making bespoke cabinets in its Wimbledon workshop for 30 years. Designed to take the weight of a library of books or treasured possessions, "the shelves are very strong and won't sag," says founder Susan Barry.

The London Door Company

The London Door Company draws on its experience and the gallery of images it has gained over the past 35 years to help clients design their perfect door. No two designs are the same, with scale drawings and a mock-up provided before the final decision is taken. Individual glass, ironmongery, locks and finishes are all considered and provided.

MODULAR DESIGN

Launched in 1952, three generations of skilled designers and craftsmen have gradually evolved the BoConcept Urban Danish Design concept that looks beautiful and functions effectively. Modular rather than bespoke, today you can choose just one piece or an entire interior, confident that every aspect has been carefully considered.
